

Just Say No

There are many harmful or even lethal substances out there crippling our society today. Those substances are drugs. Drugs are one of the worst things you can do to yourself or others. Drug use does not just affect the user, it affects everyone around the user. While high, the user can easily become hostile and dangerous. The addicted person sets a bad example for kids, which can destroy the youth of our nation. Drugs can cause you to lose your job, ruin your relationship or family, and causes mental illness and ultimately death.

Jobs are very important, they keep you happy with money and food/ Well, drugs can ruin all of that. If a person under the influence of drugs were caught, they would be fired because are illegal, and most people don't want drug-users in their business or company. Say the user didn't have a job, they probably go to school. If he or she gets caught taking drugs they will be kicked off sports teams or expelled. If they don't get caught they still won't achieve as much in school so they won't be able to get a good job.

Most drug users have a family or relationship of their own, that could be over for them soon. If the user has a family the other adult or parent would most likely try to stop the user. Sometimes, they have been taking the drug so long that they can't stop. The other adult or parent will not want that around them because they could get in trouble too, or kids could get influenced. The user is also hurting the family because drug use can cause the user to lie, cheat and steal. Same goes with relationships they have.

This can all get worse, drugs eventually result in mental illness and eventually death. In some cases the user has tried to kill himself or herself or the people around them because of it. Drugs can also end up causing many different kinds of cancers which can cause death. Mental illness can also lead to being put in jail from the things it can make you do. If the users does quit this terrible addiction he or she will be scarred with the loss of brain cells causing slower reaction which is important in many things especially driving.

Losing your job, ruining your relationship or family, and mental illness and ultimately death are just a few horrible things drugs can do. The people doing drugs really are influencing kids today to think about or actually try drugs. Soon those kids will be setting bad examples for the next generation and it goes on and on. So it does matter if just one person does it, they influence everyone around them. So remember, don't be that one person. Be the change you want to see in our society. Be drug free.
